

First Comes Saturday, Then Comes Sunday

This film is a documentary containing interviews with Christians as well as exclusive footage showing how dangerous their situation is under Islamic rule.

SYNOPSIS:

Why has there been a great, and little reported, Christian exodus from the Middle East, with some two million fleeing in the past 20 years alone? This Christian exodus is a result of many factors, including the fighting between Israelis and Palestinians, and the related decline of the economy. But, perhaps most significantly, the religious persecution these Christians encounter from their Muslim neighbors. "First comes Saturday, then comes Sunday" is a well-known sentence in the Middle East meaning: "First we take care of the Jews" (who pray on Saturday) then we will take care of the Christians, the "Sunday people."

This movie explores in detail the cause of this exodus, and is a riveting and timely look into the dynamics of Islam, the Middle East and how Islam seeks to enslave or eradicate those not
